Ask A Recruiter

“I am preparing for an interview next week and have begun researching the company, hiring manager and position. What can I ask my recruiter to help me prepare?”

~ Chris P., Temecula, CA

Research is one of the most crucial parts to preparing for an interview. The knowledge you gather can set you apart from the crowd and move you forward to the next step. Recruiters can be a great resource for information; they have a relationship with the company, have represented other candidates in the past, and their knowledge can be priceless. You should ask for any additional information regarding the schedule and structure of the interview and inside tips about the hiring manager, team, company and projects. It is their goal to assist you with locating your next position and sharing their knowledge will help you do just that!
